Lila had always been cautious in her relationships, never the type to rush into things. But when she met Ethan at a friend's dinner party, they immediately. There was an undeniable spark between them. Their first was effortless, and it seemed like they could, she thought they were a match made in heaven.

The next few weeks were a whirlwind of late-night conversations and stolen glances. Ethan seemed perfect — charming, attentive. Soon, Lila was, feeling more than ever before.

Still, something about Ethan always seemed a little too polished. Soon he would distance himself, leaving Lila feeling emotional, urging her to nag about their relationship. Ethan acted like Lila was being dramatic, and for a brief moment, she wondered if she was. They began to over small things, and Ethan would occasionally her without even realizing it.

Then, in a of honesty, Ethan confessed to an he had been hiding. He had believed they could move past it, but the truth shattered everything. What could have been love was now lost in betrayal.
