

1- What does connectivism say about the nature of knowledge in the digital age? Drag the correct answers to the circles

Knowledge is static and fixed.

Knowledge is constantly evolving and being updated.

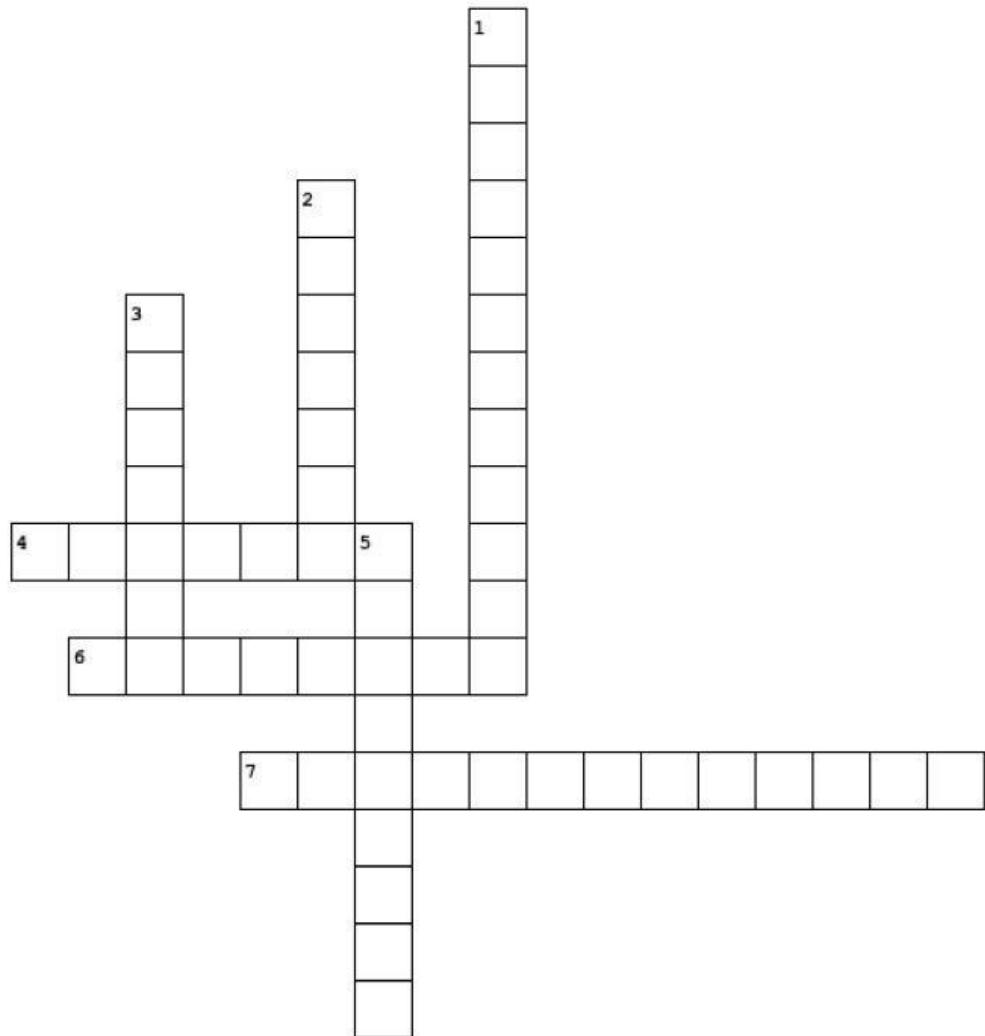

Knowledge is distributed across networks and systems.

Knowledge is only found in formal education settings.

Knowledge is irrelevant in modern learning contexts.

Knowledge is created through connections and interactions with others.

2- Complete the crossword about connectivism

Across

4. A system of interconnected people and resources that facilitate learning.
6. An online tool or environment that supports collaborative and connectivist learning.
7. The act of working together with others to enhance understanding and knowledge.

Down

1. The learning theory proposed by George Siemens that emphasizes the role of networks in knowledge acquisition.
2. An individual who engages actively in the learning process.
3. Relating to technology, particularly the internet, used as a medium for learning.
5. The information and skills acquired through experience or education.