PART III: Reading

Once upon a time in the little town of Creativityville, there lived a kid named Lily who loved trying new things. Lily was crazy about making things herself, or as she called it, doing DIY projects. One day, Lily received a special craft kit filled with colorful papers, glitter, and beads. It was perfect for making her own beautiful bracelets.

Lily was keen to get started, so she spread out her supplies and began folding and shaping the paper into intricate origami animals to add as charms to her bracelets. The afternoon turned into a fantastic journey of creativity. Lily was so fond of her new handmade accessories that she decided to make matching ones for her friends.

As Lily was working on her creations, she remembered her friend Max, who loved spending time outdoors and staying in shape. Lily thought of a great way to keep in touch with Max – she would make a special bracelet just for him and attach a little origami dumbbell as a charm, symbolizing his love for exercising and building strong muscles.

Once Lily finished her masterpiece, she carefully crafted a heartfelt message to Max, expressing how much she valued their friendship. Lily knew Max might detest receiving boring messages, so she decided to make it fun and added a little puzzle at the end for him to solve.

The next day, Lily and Max met at the local park. Lily handed Max the surprise bracelet, and he was thrilled! They spent the afternoon tackling a challenging puzzle together, laughing and enjoying their time in the fresh air. Lily realized that creating things with her own hands not only brought joy to her but also strengthened the bonds of friendship.

And so, in Creativityville, Lily continued to balance her love for DIY, friendship, and outdoor adventures, creating wonderful memories that would last a lifetime.
