A long time ago in a beautiful town of Kraków near the Wawel Hill people happily under the rule of a kind king Krak but one day a terrifying dragon its home in a cave beneath Wawel Hill. The dragon roared so loudly that it shook the town and everyone scared.

The king was worried. The monster was causing so much trouble and every week the dragon a certain number of sheep to eat. Krak offered a great reward to anyone who could defeat the dragon.

A young, clever shoemaker named Skuba about the king's offer. He came up with a plan to trick the dragon using his wits instead of weapons.

Skuba the stuffed sheep outside the dragon's cave. The dragon was always greedy and hungry so it the sheep up without thinking.

But the sheep was filled with sulphur so soon the dragon a terrible burning in his stomach and run to the river Wisła to drink water. The dragon and drank until it could drink no more and then its stomach burst.

The town of Kraków was saved. The people cheered for Skuba the clever shoemaker who defeated the dragon without the single sword but with a needle. Skuba the hero of Kraków.

Remember!

Bravery isn't just about strength, it is about using your wits too.
