

“There is/There are” vs. “Has/Have”

The verb “to have” indicates possession/belonging. There must be a subject before the verb “to have” to indicate who/what possesses the object that follows.

All of the students have their books.

She has a new apartment!*

The phrase “there is/are” usually occurs at the beginning of a sentence or phrase, and acts as a subject and verb. “There is/are” indicates that something (the object) exists, usually in a specific place.

In my new apartment, there are two bedrooms.

There is a Walmart nearby.

Choose the correct option to complete the following sentences.

1. _____ a magical museum in Boston.
2. The Isabella Stewart Gardner museum _____ a beautiful courtyard.
3. _____ many exotic plants in the courtyard garden.
4. The galleries _____ hundreds of artworks for visitors to enjoy.
5. If you're hungry, _____ a café that serves delicious food.
6. The museum often _____ special exhibitions.
7. _____ concerts at the museum throughout the year.
8. The museum also _____ a bookshop where you can buy a souvenir of your visit.
9. I _____ many happy memories of my visits to the Gardner Museum!
10. _____ special places you enjoy in the city where you live?

Photo by King of Hearts, CC BY-SA 4.0, via Wikimedia Commons