Restaurant Review

The “Open House” is a café located in the middle of a little village surrounded by three national forests near Chantilly, the city of horses. For those involved in golf, horse racing and polo, it is their preferred hangout.

Upon arrival, the stunning environment greets you, showcasing a charming fusion of vintage-style cut stones and contemporary amenities. Every table has a fantastic view of the kitchen, which resembles a workshop where you can see the cooks in action. In case you don’t reserve a table and have to wait, there’s a comfortable lounge including vintage leather armchairs and wall-mounted photos of polo stars.

There are several delectable appetisers to choose from on the menu. My companion got the zucchini carpaccio with sun-dried tomatoes and a mozzarella strudel, while I had the white asparagus with mousseline sauce and poached eggs. They were very beautiful. We were particularly excited about the main dish, which was a cream-cooked scallop risotto and a coley cassoulette with mussels. After everything, there was a delectable apple pie for dessert, along with a scoop of vanilla ice cream.

Every item was fresh, and the food had the comforting feel of being prepared at home. The finest quality ingredients are carefully chosen by the chefs. The restaurant also offers a wide variety of expensive but well-worth-tasting wines, so it can accommodate all palates.

It’s unfortunate that the excellent cuisine is not matched by the service. It’s almost impossible to get the waitresses to smile. Fortunately, the middle-aged, endearing hostess who runs the place is always happy to say hello to all of her patrons. I had a nice meal with dishes of the most beautiful flavours, even though it was expensive and the servers weren’t very attentive. I heartily suggest visiting the Open House restaurant because of this.
