

BELONGINGS YOU TAKE

It's a small device that gives off light, often used when it's dark. It runs on batteries and helps you see in low-light conditions.

It's a product used to keep insects away, especially mosquitoes. It's applied to the skin or clothes to prevent bites while outdoors.

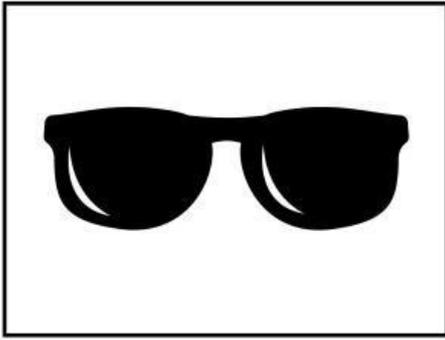

It protects the skin from UV rays, preventing sunburn and damage. It also reduces the risk of aging and skin cancer.

It's a portable shelter made from fabric and supported by poles, offering protection from the weather and insects. It provides a safe and comfortable place to sleep outdoors.

It's a bag you wear on your back to carry things. It has straps and pockets for organizing your stuff.

It's a soft, absorbent cloth used to dry your body or hair after getting wet. It helps remove moisture and keeps you comfortable.

They are something that protect your eyes from bright sunlight. They have tinted lenses to reduce glare and help you see clearly in the sun.

It's a warm, portable bed you use when camping, designed to keep you cozy during the night. It zips up to protect you from the cold and elements.

It's a compact cooking device used outdoors, allowing you to prepare meals without a kitchen. It runs on fuel or gas and is ideal for camping or picnics.

They are small power sources used to run electronic devices like flashlights, toys, and remote controls. They come in different sizes and provide energy to make things work.