

Jake and the Magic Cake

Jake loved to bake. One day, he found an old recipe for a magic cake in his grandma's cookbook.

The recipe said:

*"Bake the cake, then say a name,
The magic cake will play the game!"*

Jake was curious. He mixed the flour, sugar, eggs, and a pinch of something shiny from a little blue jar. Then he put the cake in the oven and waited.

When the cake was ready, it smelled amazing. Jake stood in front of the cake and said, "Mike." To his surprise, the cake jumped off the plate and said, "Hi, I'm Mike the Cake!"

Mike could talk, sing, and even dance! Jake and Mike became best friends. They played hide-and-seek, told jokes, and had lots of fun.

But the recipe had one more line:

"At the end of the day, the cake will fade away."

As the sun began to set, Mike started to disappear. "Don't worry," Mike said with a smile. "You can always bake me again!"

Jake promised to bake Mike another day. From then on, Jake's kitchen was always full of laughter, magic, and the smell of cakes.

Questions

Why did Jake want to bake the magic cake?

- a) He was hungry.
- b) He was curious about the recipe.
- c) His grandma told him to.
- d) He wanted to sell it.

What happened when Jake said “Mike” to the cake?

- a) The cake disappeared.
- b) The cake started to glow.
- c) The cake came to life and talked.
- d) The cake broke into pieces.

What games did Jake and Mike play together?

- a) Chess and checkers.
- b) Hide-and-seek and tell jokes.
- c) Soccer and running.
- d) Reading and writing.

What happened to Mike at the end of the story?

- a) He stayed forever.
- b) He melted in the sun.
- c) He faded away.
- d) He turned into another cake.

What promise did Jake make?

- a) To never bake again.
- b) To bake Mike another day.
- c) To write a new recipe.
- d) To share the cake with friends.