

CARBOHYDRATES

Match the first half of the sentences with the second half.

The four organic biomolecules are:

are made of very small parts which we call monomers, they are like building blocks.

Two examples of food which contain carbohydrates...

you will have to eat food which is rich in carbohydrates.

If you analyse a carbohydrate in a microscope...

a lot of fast energy.

Monomers: the substances that we obtain with food...

carbohydrates, lipids, proteins and nucleic acids.

If you want to do an energetic physical activity, for example a race,

a special kind of large molecules that are called biomolecules.

The monomer of carbohydrates...

are pasta and bread.

Biomolecules: any form of life needs to consume...

you will see that it is made of a monomer (a building block) called monosaccharide.

Carbohydrates give us...

these biomolecules is carbs.

Carbohydrates: the popular name for...

is called monosaccharide.