"Baby" by Justin Bieber follows a familiar pattern with another upbeat, innocent track where he sings about his for a girl, even though she ultimately his heart. The song follows a familiar , with Bieber sticking to his tried-and-true formula. It features the same heavy synths and catchy pop beats that have his previous work. While Bieber's sweet vocals and approach still have some , the repetitiveness of his style is becoming The most engaging part of the is the verse by Ludacris. Interestingly, Bieber repeats the word "Baby" 55 times the track. The lyrics are , and while they aren't the most clever, they are catchy, with the chorus echoing "Bay-be, bay-be, bay-be ohh." It may not be his best hit, but it still with many listeners, and that's okay.
