THE IMPERIAL ACADEMY OF HUE

Under the reign of Emperor Gia Long, along with the construction of the Temple of Literature In the new capital, an Imperial Academy was built to replace the Imperial Academy in Thang Long. By that time, the number of students was increasing each day, which required the expansion of the Academy. In 1821, an auditorium and three rows of houses for student residence were additionally constructed. In 1825, yet another row of 20 apartments were added (thêm) (2,3).

In 1908, in the reign of Duy Tân, the Imperial Academy was moved to its present-day site in the Forbidden City. The Imperial Academy consists of Di Luan Mansion, located in the center and two rows of classrooms on either side. Behind the Academy stands the Tan Tho Museum (Imperial Fine Arts Museum) and the former houses of principals and vice-principals to either side. The Imperial Academy, a historic and cultural vestige of remarkable value, is one of the two oldest tertiary training institutions of the monarchist regime in our country.
