The Ant and The Grasshopper

One sunny day in summer, a group of ants was working hard collecting food. They knew winter would come, and there would be no food. Nearby, a grasshopper was playing and laughing at the ants. "Why work so hard, Ants? Come and enjoy the day!" said the grasshopper. The ants stopped and said, "We are collecting food for the winter. When the snow comes, there will be no food. What will you eat then, Grasshopper?"

The grasshopper ignored them and kept playing. When winter came, the ground was covered in snow. The ants stayed warm in their nest. They had plenty of food because they worked hard in summer. Meanwhile the grasshopper was cold and hungry because there was no food outside. The grasshopper felt weak and regretted wasting his time in summer.

The grasshopper went to the ants' nest and begged the ants for food, but they said, "You should have worked hard like us." The grasshopper felt very sorry. From that day, the grasshopper promised to work hard like the ants. When summer returned, he prepared for winter and learned the value of hard work.
