paragraph below for question no. 1 - 4

Indonesia is known for its tropical climate, which can bring extreme weather conditions. One of the most common extreme weather events in the country is heavy rainfall, especially during the monsoon season. This often causes floods in many areas, especially in big cities like Jakarta. In some regions, like in the mountains, the weather can be very cold, and there are even heavy snowfalls in the highest peaks. On the other hand, certain parts of Indonesia, such as East Nusa Tenggara, often experience droughts due to the dry season, leading to water shortages. These extreme weather conditions have a significant impact on people's daily lives and the environment. It is important for the government and citizens to be prepared for these events to minimize damage and ensure safety.

Weather Report

Presenter: Here`s Lucy with the weather report. What have you got for us today, Lucy?

Lucy: I`ve got some very wild weather! Let`s start in scotland. It`s not good at all, we`ve got thunderstorms and heavy rain.

Presenter: That`s awful

Lucy : well, it`s worse in Nothern England. There`s heavy rain here too, and there are already floods in some parts. The rain is becoming heavier this afternoon, and that means more floods.

Presenter: Oh no!

Lucy: In Shouthern England the weather is very different. ItIs another dry day here. But that`s bad news for gardeners. The last rainy day was three weeks ago. There`s no water for trees and plants.

Presenter : what about wales?

Lucy: There`s some windy weather in wales today. In fact, there`s a tornado warning.

Presenter : a tornadao?

Lucy: yes, the tornado is moving across the country this afternoon. But there are some good news for Nothern Ireland. That`s the best place to be today. It`s 24 degrees and there aren`t any storms, or floods, or tornadoes. It`s a lovely day.

Presenter : well, thank you Lucy for that wild weather report.
