Read the following passage about Education Options for Young Students and mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 23 to 30.

In today's world, cultural heritage is at risk due to rapid modernization and globalization. Many ancient artifacts and traditions are in danger of being lost forever. UNESCO estimates that one-third of the world's cultural heritage is in jeopardy. As countries modernize, there is a tendency to overlook the importance of preserving traditional objects, languages, and practices. For example, many indigenous languages are disappearing as younger generations switch to more widely spoken languages like English or Mandarin.

When a culture fades, so does its unique way of life. Cultural objects carry knowledge and customs that help people understand the past. A good example is the art of weaving practiced by the Native American Navajo people. Their weaving patterns tell stories passed down through generations. If these traditions are not preserved, future generations may never fully understand their cultural significance.

Fortunately, many organizations are working to protect endangered cultural heritage. For instance, museums around the world have begun digital archiving projects to preserve artifacts and art forms. These digital collections are accessible online, allowing people globally to learn about different cultures. Additionally, governments are passing stricter laws to prevent the illegal trade of cultural objects.

The preservation of cultural heritage is crucial for maintaining diversity and understanding among different societies. Technology, education, and international cooperation are all essential tools in ensuring that these treasures are not lost. Efforts to protect cultural heritage should be continued and strengthened in the coming years.
