Questions no 22 to 24 refer to the following text!

(Reuters Health) – Half of all heart patients made at least one medication-related mistake after leaving the hospital, and guidance from a pharmacist didn't seem to reduce those errors, in a new study.

Consequences of mistakes – such as forgetting to take certain drugs or taking the wrong dose – can range from side effects like constipation to more serious drops in blood pressure. Two percent of errors were life-threatening.

Hospitals involved in the study were already taking steps to prevent medication mistakes in addition to the extra pharmacist intervention, said Dr. Sunil Kripalani, the study's lead author from the Vanderbilt University Medical Center in Nashville, Tennessee.

"We were surprised to see that in spite of these efforts that 50 percent (of patients) were still having these medication errors," he told Reuters Health.

Although the pharmacist visits didn't help the average patient, he added, certain ones seemed to benefit – such as patients who were on multiple drugs or had trouble understanding health information.

As for traditionally lower-risk patients, he said other strategies to prevent errors may be needed.

Questions Number 28 – 30 refer to the following text!

Fort Rotterdam Makassar

Fort Rotterdam is located at Jalan Ujung Pandang, Makassar. This fort was built in 1545 by the 9th King of Gowa, named I Manrigau Daeng Bonto Karaeng Lakiung. Initially, this fort was made of clay, but during the reign of the 14th King of Gowa, Sultan Alauddin, the construction was changed to padas stone which was sourced from the Karst Mountains in the Maros area.

Fort Rotterdam is shaped like a turtle that is about to crawl down into the ocean. In terms of shape, the philosophy of the Kingdom of Gowa is very clear. Turtles can live on land or in the sea; likewise with the Gowa Kingdom which triumphed on land and at sea.

The original name of Fort Rotterdam is Fort Ujung Pandang. It is also common for Gowa-Makassar people to call this fort Panyyua Fort, the headquarters of the Gowa Kingdom frogmen. The Kingdom of Gowa-Tallo signed the Bungayya agreement, which required the Kingdom of Gowa to hand this fort over to the Dutch.

When the Dutch occupied this fort, the name Fort Ujung Pandang was changed to Fort Rotterdam. Cornelis Speelman deliberately chose the name to commemorate his birthplace in the Netherlands. This fort was later used by the Dutch as a center for storing spices in eastern Indonesia. Around 200 years ago, the Dutch used this fort as a center for government, economy and other activities.

In 1937, ownership of Fort Rotterdam by the Dutch Indies Government was transferred to the Fort Rotterdam Foundation. The fort was registered as a historic building on May 23, 1940. In the Ujung Pandang Fort complex, there is now the La Galigo Museum, in which there are many references to the history of the greatness of Makassar (Gowa-Tallo) and other areas in South Sulawesi. Most of the fort buildings are still intact and have become a tourist attraction in Makassar City.

Sari Industries
42 Park Road
Colombo, Sri Lanka

Sirs:

At the recent International Import Fair in Singapore we noticed your collection of handmade textiles. We were impressed by the unique colors and designs. We believe the type of textiles you had on exhibit would work well with our line of women's clothing, and we are interested in purchasing a quantity. Your representative was unable to give us an idea of when you expect to have these designs ready for export.

Our designers will be in Colombo on the 15th of next month to choose materials for our summer line, to be exhibited in February of next year. I would like to have them meet with representatives of your company to select textiles and to arrange for ordering and delivery. I am hoping that you would have the material ready for export within the next few months. We will need sufficient quantities by early May in order to start our production process on time. If this seems feasible, please contact me so that we can set up a meeting for next month.

We were impressed by the quality of material you exhibited at the fair and are excited about the prospect of incorporating it into our clothing designs. We look forward to establishing a relationship with your company.

Sincerely,
Robert Simon
