Confidence and Communication

Confidence is an important factor in effective communication. When you feel confident, you are more likely to express yourself clearly and assertively. Good communicators know how to maintain eye contact and use positive body language. However, confidence isn't just about speaking well—it's also about listening attentively. People who are confident in communication make others feel comfortable, which helps build stronger relationships. Developing confidence takes time and practice.

You can improve your confidence by practicing speaking in front of others, asking for feedback, and learning from past experiences. It's also helpful to observe confident communicators and try to adopt their behaviors. Confidence is a skill that can be built and refined with patience. The more you practice, the more comfortable you will feel in conversations, which can improve your relationships and career opportunities.

31. What is the main idea of the passage?

- A. Confidence helps improve your speaking and listening skills.
- B. Speaking well is more important than listening when communicating.
- C. Confidence is only about how well you speak.
- D. Listening skills are more important than speaking skills.

32. Which of the following is NOT TRUE according to the passage?

- A. Confidence can help build stronger relationships.
- B. Good communicators don't need to practice.

- C. Eye contact and positive body language are important.
- D. Confidence is developed over time.

33. The word 'feedback' refers to:

- A. A form of communication
- B. A way of giving advice
- C. A response or suggestion
- D. A form of encouragement

34. What helps people feel more comfortable in a conversation?

- A. Eye contact
- B. Speaking loudly
- C. Asking many questions
- D. Avoiding eye contact

35. How can you improve your confidence?

- A. By practicing speaking in front of others
- B. By avoiding feedback
- C. By ignoring body language
- D. By not listening to others..
