A special history lesson

Last month, Harry's class took the bus to visit an old castle at the top of a hill. When they arrived, their teacher, Mrs Hope, stood outside and told them about the history of the castle. "History is so boring," Harry thought. "I'll go exploring by myself."

Inside the castle, he found a heavy door at the end of a long hall. He pushed it open and saw a beautiful woman. She was sitting alone in the dark empty room. 'Hello,' she said. 'My name is Mary. This castle was my home four hundred years ago.'

Mary was very friendly and Harry was interested in her story, so he sat with her and chatted. She told him all about the kings and queens of the castle long ago. Harry forgot about his classmates until he heard Mrs Hope call everyone back to the bus. 'Thanks for the stories, Mary,' Harry said. 'I'll never forget you.'

The next day, Mrs Hope wanted the children to talk about their visit. 'Did you enjoy the stories the actors told you?' she asked. 'Actors?' asked Harry. 'Yes, Harry. There was an actor in every room, with the story of a person who lived there in the past. Didn't you talk to one?' asked Mrs Hope. 'Oh, no!' Harry said. 'Mary's story was a history lesson?' 'Yes, it was, Harry,' the teacher said and smiled.
