Beatriz's blog:

A memorable holiday

I grew up in Portugal, and although my mother worked very long hours, we never had much money, so we rarely went away on holiday. I didn't mind. We lived in a beautiful village by the sea, and I loved playing with my friends during the summer. But I remember one amazing journey that we made when I was about nine years old. My mother borrowed a car from a friend and the three of us – me, my sister and my mum – spent two weeks travelling around the country. We stayed on campsites or with family, and for one, very exciting night, we even stayed on a friend's houseboat. We were travelling down to Lisbon to celebrate my grandmother's 70th birthday. She lived in a tiny apartment in the city centre and didn't have enough space for a big party. But my uncle knew someone who had a very small farmhouse with a field in a village called Azóia. It was close to my uncle's home in Sintra, just 40 kilometres from Lisbon, and so we all met there. We put a long table and lots of chairs in the field, and everyone made food to share. My cousins made a beautiful cake, but I think my favourite was my aunt's piri piri chicken – a traditional spicy Portuguese dish. After the food, there was music and dancing. We decided to camp in the field that night, before driving back to our village the next morning. I don't think my sister and I slept much, but we had a wonderful time. My grandmother is going to be 85 next year, and she still talks about the best party of her life!
