Dandelia the Glass Haired Princess

There lived a princess Dandelia from Fistulina Kingdom who was as beautiful as a dandelion flower. Princess Dandelia was smart with beautiful shiny black hair like glass.

One day, a disaster stroke with the great fire. The citizens of Fistulina fled to the Kingdom of Alnicola, their neighbour. Because they were in a hurry, they didn't have time to bring any valuables. At first, King Alnicola welcomed him with open arms. But, over time, he could not afford to continue to bear the lives of the Fistulina people. On the other hand, the Fistulina Kingdom needed a lot of money to rebuild the empire.

King Alnicola suggested King Fistulina to pay a high price as long as he can have such beautiful hair. But when the king begged it to Princess Dandelia, she refused it.

King Fistulina got an idea of cutting Princess Dandelia's glass hair while sleeping but the plan failed. Feeling worried, Princess Dandelia secretly fled from the palace. Princess Dandelia walked on and on. Along the way, many children surrounded Princess Dandelia while admiring her hair. Princess Dandelia was stunned looking at the skinny, pale, starving children. Unknowingly Princess Dandelia's tears fell. Her heart was touched to see the children's suffering.

Princess Dandelia quickly ran to his father and gave her hair to the people of Fistulina. Every morning, to her surprise, Princess Dandelia found her hair was as long as it used to be! King Fistulina sold Princess Dandelia's glass hair to the neighbouring kingdoms. Some used them as wigs and as decorations for royal crowns. Turned out, it's not just her hair that's shiny. Barbara Linda

I have just visited a place that is incredibly beautiful and unique, with vast craters. The Kelimutu volcano is located 50 km east of Ende in central Flores, accessible via a road that winds through small villages and rice terraces. Since this volcano is part of a national park, the entrance fee is applicable. It is affordable for locals and foreign Indonesian work visa holders, while for international tourist, it is slightly higher (around US$15).

From parking area, a few hiking trails go up to the summit which features 3 steep-sided craters with actively roiling multi-colored lakes. On a clear day you can see gases bubbling to the surface and a sulfide scum on the surface of the first two lakes. The local lake names are Tiwu Ata Bupu (Lake of Old People - blue), and the other two lakes, Tiwu Ko'o Fai Nuwa Muri (Lake of Young Men and Maidens - bluish-green) and Tiwu Ata Polo ("Villany" Lake - red) separated by a shared crater wall.

The distinctive lake colors are resulted from gas and steam. They vent from the bottom of two crater lakes, releasing CO2 and H2S gases from a magma chamber deep beneath the mountain. The colors change yearly due to different chemical reactions involving rainwater, groundwater, volcanic gases, and the presence of iron and manganese. Notably, the colors in each lake change independently, suggesting a unique connection to the underlying magma chamber. Many impressions at Kelimutu await you there!

Data Encryption

Encryption is a way of scrambling data so that only authorized persons can understand the information. In technical terms, it is the process of changing human-readable plaintext to random text, also known as ciphertext. In simpler terms, encryption takes readable data and modifies it. Therefore, it appears randomly.

Encryption requires the use of a cryptographic key, a set of mathematical values that both the sender and the recipient of an encrypted message agree on. A cryptographic key is a string of characters used within an encryption algorithm for modifying data. Like a physical key, it locks (encrypts) data so that only someone with the right key can unlock (decrypt) it.

Encryption is important in several ways. Encryption ensures that no one can read any data except the intended recipient or the rightful data owner. This prevents hackers, ad networks, internet service providers, and even governments from capturing and reading sensitive or private data. Encryption also helps prevent malicious behavior such as on-path attacks. When data is transmitted across the internet, encryption ensures that what the recipient receives has not been viewed or changed during the transmission.
