Some also argue that the exam promotes competition, which can improve the overall quality of education in Indonesia.

In many cases, it encourages students to rote learning rather than learning meaningfully.

Additionally, the practice of National Examination could be unfair.

The government is considering bringing back the National Examination in Indonesian schools.

It is recommended that if the National Examination is re-implemented, it should be redesigned to be more inclusive, flexible, and supportive of various student needs and conditions.

On the other hand, critics argue that the National Examination creates unnecessary pressure and stress for students.

Those who support the re-implementation of National Examination believe that it provides a standardized way to evaluate students' academic performance across the country.
