The Amazon Rainforest

The Amazon Forest covers five million square kilometers, an area as big as the whole of Europe, excluding Russia. It contains one-third of the world's trees. However, the trees are disappearing. By 1974, a quarter of the forest had already been cut down. In the following year, 1975, four percent of the remaining trees went. If the destruction of the forest continues at the same rate, there will be nothing left in a few years.

Scientists say that the disappearance of trees is causing changes in the climate. In Peru, there is less now than before on the high peaks of the Andes mountains. In Bolivia, there is very little rain.

What will happen if more of the Amazon Forest is cut down? According to climatologists, if the Amazon Forest disappears, there will be less oxygen and it will be difficult for us to breathe, the temperature will rise, and the ice caps at the North and the South poles will melt. Even the sea level will rise. Therefore, seaside cities will be flooded.

Scientists do not agree about the calculations which can be done in different ways with different results. But all the scientists agree that if we destroy the Amazon Forest, it will be an environmental disaster. Life on Earth will become difficult, and it may become impossible.
