By 2050 we (be) able to send memories, emotions and feelings across the internet. Brain science (have) exploded, and it (have) revolutionised communication. Teenagers (love) it. Instead of putting an emoticon at the end of every sentence, they (use) an emotion: anger, happiness, excitement. This will replace entertainment; movies (become) obsolete. I'm talking about telepathy, really. We will still communicate the old-fashioned way, but communicating telepathically will reduce the obstacles between people. Our grandchildren (wonder), What is a keyboard? We will enter the age of the "brain net".

We (grow) organs to replace those that wear out. We can already use human cells to grow skin, cartilage, noses, ears, heart valves, bladders... In the future? We will grow the liver, the kidney, perhaps the pancreas. By 2050 I suspect we (be) able to grow many of the vital organs of the body and, rather than allow the organs we're born with to become old and decrepit, we (replace) them. That's all coming. And it doesn't take much imagination to realise it.
