

Yes, the story _____(is) sad. The sinking goat _____(become) weaker and weaker and she even _____(can't) cry for help. Clumsy and Mr. Beaver _____(are) standing near the thin tree and _____(can't) reach the tree to bend it down.

Suddenly, they _____(hear) a noise behind them and _____(see) the squirrels jumping along the brushwood road.

They _____(ask) Clumsy where the useful goat _____(is).

The bear _____(ask) them to jump onto the thin branch and bend it down. This way the goat will reach the branch of the tree and they will pull Gracie out.

The squirrels _____(say) to step aside, because the heroes _____(are) on their way.

So the squirrels _____(jump) onto the tree and bend it down. The poor goat _____(grab) the branch and the animals _____(pull) the goat out.

The goat _____(say) "thank you" to kind Clumsy and his friends. The goat _____(is) tired and she _____(is) crying.

They _____(tell) her not to cry. They _____(want) to help her. Clumsy calls the butterfly and asks her to show Gracie the way to the farm.

She _____(take) Gracie to her house.

That evening all the animals could see the flying butterfly and the strange scary but very tired animal walking through the wood.

They _____(save) Gracie and the bog _____(is) not dangerous to anyone because now there is the brushwood road across it.
