No one can say exactly which jobs will be popular in the future. However, we do know which types of jobs people will have and what skills they will need. As technology continues to develop, some jobs will become less popular than they used to be in the past while others will become popular.

I believe that being a robotics engineer will become one of the most popular jobs in the future. These engineers will design and develop robots for different purposes in almost every field, in particular surgery, where the practice needs to be accurate in order not to put patients in danger. Underwater or faraway planet exploration will also put these engineers in high demand.

With technological advancement at the forefront, the demand for AI engineers is rising quickly. These professionals are sought for their expertise in developing AI solutions. As businesses increasingly rely on data-driven decision- making, the role of AI engineers becomes essential.

Sustainable energy engineers will also be a popular job. These engineers develop and implement renewable energy solutions, such as solar power or wind energy to reduce the impact of human activities on the environment.

In summary, the popularity of these jobs reflects society 's focus on technological innovation and environmental responsibility.

23. Future jobs will relate to advancement of technology. _____

24. Robots will make the surgery practice safe in order not to put patients in danger. _____

25. The development of the society only depends on technological innovation. _____
