She wrote letters to experts around the world and studied what trees could grow in dry places.	She was the first woman to graduate from college.
She was a teacher.	Kate loved nature as a child.
The great fair was going to take place in City Park.	Kate's trees were planted along the streets.
She studied well in school.	She decided to become a gardener.
She moved to San Diego and saw no trees.	San Diego became green and shady.
More trees were planted thanks to people's volunteer work.	She felt comfortable in the woods.
Kate became known as the "Mother of Balboa Park."
