

Bilbo was always [redacted], for they were extremely careful with their [redacted]. They once shot a [redacted] with an arrow, but when they [redacted] it, it had a [redacted] taste, and they shot no more [redacted]. They were [redacted] too, for they had very little [redacted], and in all the time they had seen neither spring nor [redacted]. And then they saw that their path was [redacted] by running water. It flowed [redacted] and strong, and it looked [redacted]. They remembered that Beorn had warned them against it