

Adverbs used with the present perfect

1 Use still and yet in negative sentences to emphasise something is not completed but we expect it to happen.

a still goes before have.

I still haven't decided.

b yet goes at the end of the sentence.

I haven't decided yet.

2 Use just to show something happened very recently.

I've just finished my last exam.

3 Use already to emphasise that something is completed (often before it was expected).

You don't need to give them any money. I've already paid for everything.

4 Use so far at the start (or the end) of a sentence to mean until now.

so far, I've been to four different countries.

5 Use even to show something is surprising.

He's been everywhere. He's even been to Antarctica!

6 Use only to emphasise nothing else has been done.

I've only applied to the two universities I most want to study at.

Adverbs used with the present perfect

Complete the sentences with the adverbs in brackets.

1 I started building the house two years ago, but I haven't finished it. (still)

2 I'm trying to visit every football ground in the league. I've been to 16. (so far)

3 I've had three job interviews this month, but I haven't heard anything. (already, yet)

4 I've returned from Moldova. I'm trying to visit every country in Europe. There are two I haven't been to now! (just, only)

5 I want to buy a flat, but I've saved €15,000 so far. You can't buy anything for that amount of money. (only)

6 I often go fishing, but I haven't had much luck. I haven't caught a small one for ages now. (lately, even).