

ELISION OF /t/:

She must<sup>t</sup> be tired

We slept<sup>t</sup> through the storm.

He left<sup>t</sup> school early.

Listen. Is there elision?

I can't stand the rain.

It must be time to leave

I met him at the center.

I don't want it

ELISION OF /d/:

I prefer steamedd potatoes.

I prefer boiledd potatoes.

I prefer steamedd potatoes to boiledd potatoes.

I prefer boiledd potatoes.

Listen. Is there elision?

My best friend let me borrow his car.

She called her friend yesterday.

Don't hold back – say what you mean.

He played chess with his brother

His bike rolled down the hill without him.
