Task 2: Read and answer the questions.

In many families, doing housework is a shared responsibility. In my family, we believe that everyone should contribute to keeping our home clean and tidy.

My parents have the busiest schedules, but they still do a lot of chores. My mother often does the laundry, irons clothes, and cooks delicious meals. My father usually vacuums the carpets, sweeps the floor, and mows the lawn on Sunday mornings.

As for my younger brother and me, we also take part in household chores. I am responsible for making my bed every morning, dusting the furniture in the living room, and taking out the trash every evening. My brother helps by setting the table before meals, washing the dishes after dinner, and sometimes mopping the floor.

On weekends, we often work together. We clean the windows, organize our rooms, and even rearrange furniture if needed. Although housework can be tiring, we know it helps us learn responsibility, teamwork, and respect for our living space.

1. What does the mother do in the family?

2. When does the father mow the lawn?

3. What does the writer's brother do?

4. Why do they think housework is important?
