On the Christmas Eve, 17-year-old Juliane Kopcke and her mother took a flight to Peru to see her father, a famous zoologist working in the rainforest there. The airline they used had a bad reputation, but they wanted to come in time to spend Christmas together.

At first, everything went smoothly. Then the plane flew into some dense, dark clouds and suddenly started to shake. Juliane and her mother saw a bright flash of light. The frightened passengers started screaming as their Christmas presents were flying around in the plane. After a few terrifying moments, the airplane exploded (взорвался) and fell apart. Juliane was thrown out of the plane by the force of the explosion.

When Juliane came to herself (пришла в себя), she found herself in the middle of the rainforest, still in her plane seat. She was completely alone, the only survivor. She had many wounds (раны) but was alive. Fortunately, Juliane remembered her father's advice on surviving in the wilderness. She knew she must follow water downstream to find civilization. She found a stream of water nearby and started walking downstream. She trekked through the knee-deep water. Sometimes she saw a crocodile, but thanks to her father, she learned not to fear them as they rarely attack humans.

After incredible 9 days without sleep, food and shelter, she finally got to a small house. She sat down and waited for the owners to come. A couple hours later, the man staying there returned and got her back to safety.
