If I could travel anywhere

Sofia often imagines what she would do if she could travel anywhere in the world. She says, “If I had the chance, I would go to Italy first. I would visit Rome and Venice because I love history and art. If I lived near the Colosseum, I might take a walk there every evening. I could also learn Italian and meet new friends.”

She doesn’t stop there. Sofia adds, “If I won the lottery, I would travel for a whole year. I would visit Japan to see the cherry blossoms and eat sushi every day. If my best friend came with me, we might climb Mount Fuji together. After that, I would like to explore South America. If I spoke Spanish fluently, I could communicate with local people and enjoy the culture more.”

Even though she knows these are imaginary situations, Sofia believes that thinking about them motivates her. “If I study hard now, I might get a good job in the future. And if I earn enough money, I could make some of these dreams come true,” she says.

The exam mistake

Last year, Carlos had an important English exam, but he didn't prepare well. He spent too much time playing video games and going out with his friends. On the day of the test, he realized he didn't remember the grammar rules. He thought, "I should have studied more."

When he got the results, he saw that he had failed. Carlos was very disappointed. He told himself, "I could have passed if I had worked harder. I might have even gotten a high grade." His teacher also reminded him, "You should have asked for help when you didn't understand." Carlos knew she was right.

LIVEWORKSHEETS

Later, he imagined how things would have been different. “If I had passed the exam, I would have felt so proud. I would have shown my parents the result, and they would have been happy too. I wouldn’t have wasted my time feeling sad.”

Carlos learned a big lesson. Now he always studies ahead of time. He says, “I couldn’t have changed the past, but I can prepare better for the future.”

A. Read and choose the correct option

1. Why did Carlos fail the exam?
   a) He didn’t have time
   b) He didn’t study enough
   c) The exam was too easy

2. What did the teacher say Carlos should have done?
   a) Played more
   b) Asked for help
   c) Avoided the exam

3. What did Carlos learn from this experience?
   a) To prepare better in the future
   b) To stop studying
   c) To give up English

B. Find and copy 2 sentences using past modals (could have, should have, might have, would have)

WRITING ACTIVITIES

1. Write a short paragraph (120-150 words) answering the question below
If you could live anywhere in the world, where would you live? What would you do there? How would your life be different?
Use would / could / might.

Example:
If I could live anywhere in the world, I would live in Canada because I love the mountains and the snow. I would go skiing every winter and hiking in the summer. I might also learn French, since many people in Canada speak it. I would have a small house near a lake, where I could relax after work. If my friends visited me, we would explore the beautiful nature together. I could buy a canoe and spend weekends on the water. My life would be more peaceful, and I think I would feel very happy there. Of course, if I missed my home country too much, I could always visit during holidays.

LIVEWORKSHEETS

2. Write a short paragraph (120-150 words) about a time you missed an opportunity or made a mistake. Use should have, could have, would have.

Example.
Last year, I had the chance to join a school theater group, but I didn't. I told myself I was too busy with homework. Now, I think I should have joined because it would have been fun and I could have made new friends. I might have also improved my English by practicing speaking on stage. I know that if I had joined, I would have enjoyed it a lot. I would have learned how to act and how to work in a team. Instead, I stayed home and watched TV most evenings, which I regret now. I could have used my time better. Next time I get a chance like that, I will not say no.
