Me and my grandparents

Shaziye

I live with my parents in the city of Bursa, Turkey, and both my mother's and my father's parents live in a village by the sea not far from us. When they were younger, my father's parents lived and worked in Bulgaria. They were both teachers, and came back to Turkey when they finished work. I'm glad we all live in the same country now because we can see each other every week. I love their village, but they always get up very early and I do as well when I stay there. That's not easy for me!

Frida

Six people live in my house in the city of Leon, Mexico. My mother's mother, my parents, my two brothers and me. I'm really lucky because my father's parents also live in a street near our flat, so I visit them nearly every day, too. I call my mother's mother Bela. She had a restaurant and now cooks fantastic meals for us. Mum can't cook well, but I can because Bela's teaching me.

Agata

I often visit my father's parents because they live close to us. But my mother's parents are travelling around the world so it's not possible to go and see them. We often chat on the internet. My father's father works ten hours every week. He's a doctor, so we always phone him when we feel ill. My father's mother was also a doctor, but she doesn't work now. I have lunch with her on Saturdays.
