The Floating Islands of Lake Titicaca

Have you ever wondered what it's like to wake up with a different view outside your window every day? This is the daily life of the Uros people on Lake Titicaca in Peru, ____ (21) lies about 12,500 feet above sea level. There are over forty ____ (22) islands made of ____ (23) plants that gently move on the surface of the lake. These remarkable islands are home to roughly 300 people, and each island is like a small village with three to ten families living together.

The Uros build their houses from the same plants they use to make the islands. Each home usually has only one room, and the whole family shares a single bed; there is no heating, so nights can be freezing. Life is simple but unique: the men fish to feed their families and trade with nearby towns, while the women look after the children and create handmade ____ (24) to sell to visitors.

Today, the floating islands are a popular tourist attraction. Visitors can reach them ____ (25) a 30-minute motorboat ride from the city of Puno and are welcome to experience this extraordinary way of life.

The Great Wall of China

The Great Wall of China is one of the most impressive and famous landmarks in the world. It was originally built to protect China from invaders and stretches over 13,000 miles across mountains, deserts, and grasslands. The wall was constructed more than 2,000 years ago during the rule of ancient Chinese dynasties. It was made using bricks, wood, and stone, which made it strong and durable. Over the centuries, different emperors expanded and strengthened the wall to improve its defense system.

In the past, soldiers guarded the wall and used watchtowers to spot enemies from a distance. The Great Wall was not just a defense structure—it also helped control trade along the Silk Road, an important ancient trade route. Today, the Great Wall is no longer used for military purposes, but it remains a symbol of China's rich history and culture.

Millions of tourists from all over the world visit the Great Wall every year to admire its breathtaking views and historical significance. Parts of the wall have been well-preserved, while others have been damaged over time. However, efforts are being made to restore and protect this UNESCO World Heritage Site for future generations.

WRITING EXAMPLE

Ta Ma Stream is a beautiful natural landscape located in Vinh Thanh District, Binh Dinh Province. It is famous for its colorful wildflowers that bloom along the stream, making the area look like a bright painting. The water is clear and cool, and large rocks create small waterfalls where visitors can relax and take stunning photos. Ta Ma Stream is especially attractive in spring when flowers cover both sides of the stream. Tourists can walk along the paths, enjoy the fresh air, and explore the peaceful forest nearby. I really love Ta Ma because it is quiet and natural, and I think everyone should visit it once to experience its wonderful beauty.
