Reading

A Read Claire's family story.

It's amazing how sometimes there is a family story that no one talks about. One summer when I was about 10 years old, I found out something that really surprised me. At the time, I was staying with my grandparents on their farm. I loved spending time with them, but Grandad was pretty busy working every day and Grandma didn't always talk very much. I know they loved me by the way they smiled at me all the time, and they always told me that I took after my dad. However, I don't think they were always comfortable being around an energetic girl. So I had to find ways to entertain myself.

I used to love going up to the attic. I would spend hours looking through all the old stuff stored up there. There were boxes of books and papers and a lot of other interesting things. My mum had told me I would probably inherit most of it someday. One day, while I was looking around in the corner of the room, I came across a chest full of old-fashioned dresses. They looked expensive – the kind of thing a woman would wear to a fancy party. A lot of them were made of silk. 'Who do they all belong to?' I wondered. For the next few days, I kept thinking about the clothes. I finally told my grandmother what I had found. For a moment, she sat there not saying anything. Grandad looked up from his newspaper and smiled. 'Well, you can't keep it a secret,' he said. Grandma looked down at her hands and sighed. 'I guess you're right,' she said.

This is what she said. 'When I was young, I liked to sing and people said that I had a good voice. My mother had told me many times. When I was about 17 years old, I decided I wanted to become a professional singer. But there was a problem. I had fallen in love with your grandfather. I didn't want to be separated from him, but I had to leave to become a successful entertainer. I finally decided that if I didn't do it, I would always regret it. I was away for four long years.' Grandad looked up and said, 'I only saw her once when I went to see her perform. She didn't know I was in the audience; I told her about it later. I didn't want her to think about coming back until she was ready.' About six months after his visit, I was ready,' Grandma said. I went over and hugged Grandma. 'That's so sweet!' I said. 'I want to know more about it!' Grandma smiled at me and replied. 'Maybe I'll tell you more another day.' That was fine with me, but the next day I was back up in the attic looking at all Grandma's wonderful clothes and thinking about what her life must have been like then.
