Last Saturday, Hoa's class visited the Natural History Museum. In the morning, they looked at many different animals. Hoa was very surprised to see a baby mammal (a young lion) living with a pride. She also saw an amphibian, a frog that could live both in water and on land.

After that, they went to the sea life room. There were huge fish with silver scales and long fins. The guide explained: "Fish use their gills to breathe underwater." Hoa was amazed.

In the afternoon, the class joined a science workshop. They learned how carnivorous plants can trap insects with their sticky leaves. The teacher also showed them sugar in water and said: "Look! It can dissolve quickly."

Before leaving, Hoa's friend said: "Next time we come, let's see the exhibition about explorers who found new hybrids of animals."
