Snowboarding champion!

Chloe Kim is an American snowboarder. She was born in Long Beach, California, on 23 April 2000 and is famous for being the youngest woman to win an Olympic gold medal in snowboarding when she was just 17 years old. Chloe's parents have always supported her so that she could achieve her goals. Her father started training her when she was just four years old, and two years later she was already competing as part of 'Team Mountain High' in California. The US Snowboarding Team saw how talented Chloe was, so they asked her to join them in 2013. As part of the US team, Chloe won a number of competitions and was enthusiastic about taking part in the Winter X-Games in 2014, the 2016 Winter Youth Olympics and the Winter Olympics in 2018.

Unsurprisingly, Chloe Kim is popular, with almost one million followers on Instagram and Twitter, and has appeared in many magazine articles. She also appeared on a special edition box of Kellogg's Corn Flakes, which became the fastest-selling cereal box in their company's history. However, she has found that being famous means that people recognised her a lot. In 2019, Chloe enrolled at Princeton University where she is studying science. She was reported as saying that when she goes to eat in the dining hall people look at her and take photos, and she's finding it hard to stay calm and adjust to the attention.

So what is in Chloe's future? Well, she will be returning to training for the next Winter Olympics. She will need to continue to be hard-working and positive if she wants to be successful in both her studies and her athletic career.
