

TIP

When a short-vowel word ends in a single consonant, the consonant is usually doubled before adding an ending that begins with a vowel:

hum + ing = humming

In words with two or more syllables, the final consonant is usually doubled if the last syllable has a short vowel followed by a single consonant:

outfit + ed = outfitted

The Inuit people built the first kayaks thousands of years ago. In the begining, kayaks were made of animal skins stretched over wooden frames. Siting inside the kayak, the kayaker wraped the skin around his waist to make the boat watertight. The Inuit used their kayaks for fishing and hunting in the cold Arctic waters.

The modern kayak looks something like a canoe, but it is trimer and sleeker. A kayaker is outfited with a double-ended paddle to move the boat. The narrow shape and light weight of a kayak make it easy to control in the water.
