Homeschooling or School?

More and more parents in Europe decide to teach their children at home. They believe school classes are too big and teachers can't give enough attention to every student. On the other hand, traditional school offers something homeschooling doesn't – social life. Students can make friends, take part in sports events and learn teamwork. Some families choose a mix: a few days at school and a few at home. Experts say both options can work well – it depends on the child's personality and motivation.

1. Some parents teach their children at home because

- A. schools are too expensive.
- B. teachers are too strict.
- C. classes are too large.
- D. children don't like learning.

2. Traditional schools help students

- A. study faster.
- B. meet new people.
- C. spend more time with parents.
- D. stay at home.

3. Mixed learning means

- A. lessons only online.
- B. studying both at school and at home.
- C. learning in another country.
- D. studying after work.

4. Experts believe homeschooling is

- A. always better than school.
- B. not good for children.
- C. useful for shy students only.
- D. good for some children.

5. The text is mainly about

- A. different ways of learning.
- B. school trips.
- C. how to study faster.
- D. teachers in Europe.
