I have been having a problem with a girl in my class called Jenny. Basically, whatever I do, she copies me or she tries to do better than me. For example, I wore my new shoes to school last Thursday and she had the same shoes on Friday. My favourite group is The Indigoes and guess what – Jenny likes The Indigoes too and she's going to see them in concert while I haven't got a ticket. It's getting worse – I was given a silver smartphone for my last birthday and now she's got a similar smartphone but the more expensive black one. I tried talking to her one day but all she said was 'I like you and think you have great taste.' It's getting a bit creepy.
Anyway, I have been getting really fed up with it. I told my dad about it and he said 'It will pass with time and she will stop copying you.' but I don't believe him. Just today, I got to school and she has got the same jacket as me, which I only bought last weekend. What can I do?
Jo, York

The same thing happened to me. In the end it stopped when I started ignoring the person who was copying me. Try doing the same! Toni2012, Oxford

I don't think you should worry about this. It shows you have great taste. Louise23, Liverpool

I think your dad is right. Relax. This girl will soon get tired of copying you. The best thing to do is ignore her. Annie, Edinburgh
