VOCABULARY & GRAMMAR

I. Read the passage below and answer the questions that follow. Write your answers using NO MORE THAN THREE WORDS.

The Role of Language and Communication in a Global Society

In today's interconnected world, being bilingual is seen as a major advantage. People who can speak more than one language often have the ability to adapt quickly to different cultural settings. For example, someone fluent in both Mandarin and English may find it easier to work in international trade or diplomacy.

Languages like Arabic, Hindi, and Spanish are spoken by large populations, giving speakers access to a majority of global conversations. In contrast, some languages are at risk of becoming extinct due to low usage and lack of preservation.

Non-verbal communication plays a vital role too. In multicultural workplaces, gestures and body language can either help or cause confusion if not understood correctly. That's why professionals are encouraged to maintain eye contact and avoid any offence when interacting with people from different backgrounds.

In social settings, it's important to feel at ease. Those who meet people socially and are willing to learn about others tend to build stronger relationships. Meanwhile, those who are independent and have little contact with others may struggle with collaboration.
