Work in pairs. Take turns asking and answering the three questions.

Student A asks:

1. Do people in your country usually share a house or flat with other people?
2. What are the good things about living alone or with other people?
3. Are you an easy person to live with? Why/Why not?

Student B answers (2–3 sentences each), then change roles.

Useful Expressions:

- “Yes, many people...”
- “No, it’s not common because...”
- “One good thing is...”
- “I think I am easy to live with because...”

Read the text carefully.

Many people around the world choose different ways of living. In some countries, it is common for young adults to share a house or flat with friends or classmates because it is cheaper, and they can help each other with daily tasks. Sharing a home can be fun because people can cook together, talk after school or work, and feel less lonely.

However, some people prefer living alone. They enjoy having their own space. When you live alone, you can decide when to eat, when to sleep, and how to organize your home. It can be quiet and relaxing, but it can also feel lonely sometimes.

Living with others teaches people to be patient, respectful, and responsible. Living alone teaches people to be independent and organized. Both ways of living have advantages, and each person chooses the one that fits their personality and lifestyle.
