The First School

Listen to our podcast and leave a comment!

1. First comment

How interesting! First, children learned at home. I didn't know that the first teachers were women! Wow! Students had pens but they didn't have books. Rich children didn't go to school. Horace Mann changed schools.

2. Second comment

How interesting! First, children learned at home. They sat on the floor. I didn't know that the first teachers were men! Wow! Students didn't have books. Poor children didn't go to school. Horace Mann changed schools.

3. Third comment

How interesting! First, children learned from their parents. Then in small schools in farms. I didn't know that the first teachers were men! Wow! Students didn't have books. Schools were for everyone. Horace Mann couldn't change schools.

Visiting The Museum of Bad Art

The Museum of Bad Art (MOBA) opened in 1994 in Massachusetts, United States. Scott Wilson created it after he discovered an ugly painting in the rubbish on the street. He picked it up and showed it to his friends because it was funny.

The museum shows humorous and original paintings, drawings and photographs. This isn't a serious place. Many visitors laugh at the unusual designs. The museum has got more than 900 works of "bad" art but only shows 60 in the exhibition. You don't have to pay to visit: it's free!

The museum doesn't sell its paintings but there is a gift shop. It sells books, postcards, bags and hats. MOBA is an interesting place to see something different. People from all over the world come to visit it and have fun. Do you enjoy crazy art? Don't miss it!
