Yesterday morning, I felt a strong headache during my first class, so I went to the school nurse. She asked me a few questions, checked my temperature, and gave me some water. After that, she told me to rest for a few minutes on the small bed in her office. While I rested, she called my teacher to explain what happened. Ten minutes later, I felt much better, so the nurse allowed me to return to class.

Before I left, she reminded me to eat breakfast every morning and to drink more water during the day. I thanked her for the help and went back to my classroom feeling relieved.
