THE LIFE OF A FREE-DIVER

Tanya Streeter grew up on Grand Cayman Island in the middle of the Caribbean Sea. When she was a child, she loved being in the sea and she spent as much time as possible in the water, snorkelling and studying fish and other sea life. She also liked diving, that is swimming deep into the ocean to look for rocks and shells.

One day she discovered a sport she could do: 'free-diving'. Thousands of years ago, people dived into the oceans to catch fish and to look for pearls. They didn't have any equipment in those days. Today, this kind of diving has become a popular sport. They stay under the water for as long as they can and try to break world records.

Tanya had one lesson in free-diving and she found out that she was very talented. After taking many lessons she started to enter competitions. In 1998, she broke the first world record when she dived 113 metres down into the ocean. She broke many more records after that. Tanya trains for four or five hours every day in the gym and in the pool.

Tanya is also interested in looking after the environment and protecting wildlife. She has worked hard to tell the world about the problems that whales and dolphins have with sea pollution and how dangerous it is for them. She has appeared in videos, swimming with whales and has also become a popular TV presenter.
