

Little Red Riding-Hood

Once upon a time, there lived in a certain village, a little country girl, the prettiest creature ever seen. Her mother loved her a lot; and her grand-mother even much more. This good woman made her a little red riding-hood; which made the girl so extremely happy, that everybody called her Little Red Riding-Hood.

One day, her mother made some girdle-cakes, and said to her: - "Go, my dear, and see how your grandma does. I heard she has been very ill, carry her a girdle-cake, and this little pot of butter."

Little Red Riding Hood started her journey immediately to her grand-mother's house, who lived in another village. As she was going through the wood, she met with Gaffer Wolf, who had the intention to eat her up, but he dare not, because of some faggot-makers were nearby in the forest.

He asked her where she was going. The poor child, who did not know that it was dangerous to stay and hear a Wolf talk, said to him: - "I am going to see my grandma, and carry her a girdle-cake, and a little pot of butter, from my mamma." -

- "Does she live far off?" - said the Wolf.

- "Oh! ay," - answered Little Red Riding-Hood, - "it is beyond that mill you see there, at the first house in the village." -

"Well," said the Wolf, - "and I'll go and see her too: I'll go this way, while you go that, and we shall see who will be there soonest."

The Wolf began to run as fast as he could, taking the nearest way; and the little girl went by that farthest about, diverting herself in gathering nuts, running after butterflies, and making nosegays of such little flowers as she met with. The Wolf was not long before he got to the old woman's house: he knocked at the door, tap, tap.

- "Who's there?" -

- "Your grand-child, Little Red Riding-Hood," - replied the Wolf, imitating her voice, "who has brought you a girdle-cake, and a little pot of butter, sent you by mamma."

The good grand-mother, who was in bed, because she found herself somewhat ill, cried out:

"Pull the peg, and the bolt will fall."

The Wolf pulled the peg, and the door opened, and then he fell upon the good woman, and ate her up in a moment; it was above three days that he had not eaten anything. He then shut the door, and went into the grand-mother's bed, expecting Little Red Riding-Hood, who came some time afterwards, and knocked at the door, tap, tap.

- "Who's there?"

Little Red Riding Hood, hearing the big voice of the Wolf, was at first afraid; but believing her grand-mother had got a cold, and was hoarse, answered: - "Tis your grand-child, Little Red Riding Hood, who has brought you a girdle-cake, and a little pot of butter, mamma sends you."

The Wolf cried out to her, softening his voice as much as he could, "Pull the peg, and the bolt will fall."

The little girl pulled the peg, and the door opened. The Wolf seeing her come in, said to her, hiding himself under the bedclothes:

"Put the cake, and the little pot of butter upon the bread-bin, and come and lie down with me."

Little Red Riding-Hood undressed herself, and went into bed; where, being greatly amazed to see how her grand-mother looked in her night-clothes, she said to her:

"Grandma, what great arms you have got!"

"That is the better to hug you, my dear."

"Grandma, what great legs you have got!"

"That is to run the better, my child."

"Grandma, what great ears you have got!"

"That is to hear the better, my child."

"Grandma, what great eyes you have got!"

"It is to see the better, my child."

"Grandma, what great teeth you have got!"

"That is to eat you up."

And, saying these words, this wicked Wolf fell upon poor Little Red Riding Hood, and ate her all up.
