

Invitations and Excuses

Making Invitations with WOULD LIKE TO: We use would like to + base verb to invite someone in a polite way.

Structure: Would you like to + verb?

Examples:

- Would you like to go out on Friday?
- Would you like to go to a concert?
- Would you like to have dinner with me?

Accepting an Invitation

We can accept an invitation like this:

- Yes, I would.
- Yes, I'd like to.
- Yes, I'd love to. Thanks.

Note: I'd = I would

Refusing an Invitation (Making Excuses):

We use I'd like to, but... to refuse an invitation politely and give a reason.

Structure: I'd like to, but + reason.

Common verbs for excuses: The verbs want, have to, and need to express different meanings and are often used to give reasons.

- want to → expresses desire
- have to → expresses obligation
- need to → expresses necessity

Note: These verbs are followed by the infinitive with to.

Examples:

- I'd like to, but I want to visit my parents.
- I'd like to, but I have to work.
- I'd like to, but I need to study.

Practice Exercises

Exercise 1: Complete the sentences using Would you like to... and the verb in parenthesis

1. _____ to the movies tonight? (go)
2. _____ lunch with me tomorrow? (have)
3. _____ to my birthday party? (come)
4. _____ soccer this weekend? (play)

Exercise 2: Choose the correct answer.

1. Would you like to go out on Friday?

- a) Yes, I like.
- b) Yes, I would.
- c) Yes, I go.

2. Would you like to have dinner with us?

- a) Yes, I'd love to.
- b) Yes, I loving.
- c) Yes, I do.

Exercise 3: Complete the sentences with an excuse using want to, have to, need to.

1. I'd like to go to the party, but _____.
2. I'd like to play soccer, but _____.
3. I'd like to go out tonight, but _____.

Exercise 4: Write a short dialogue.

Student A: Invite a friend to do something.

Student B: Accept or refuse the invitation and give an excuse.