In the UK, for example, (14)_____ people leave school at 16 years old. Indeed, many schools only take pupils up to the age of 16 (or rather, to the end of the academic year in which they turn 16). However, that is not the end of (15)_____ education, because young people are required to be in some form of education or training until they are 18 years old. The precise form that this 'education and training' takes is fairly flexible. Those aged 16 and 17 can go (16)_____ to study for A-levels, or they can do some form of technical or vocational qualifications, or they can combine work and study, for example by doing a(n) (17)_____.

(18)_____, plenty of people continue to study beyond that date—and not just in higher education. At further education colleges, you may find young people over 18 who are retaking exams to improve their grades, those who have missed a year or more of school because of illness or other issues, older adults who want to gain new (19)_____, and those who have come straight from school.
