

Painting With Words

Great writers paint pictures with words, so readers can imagine the author's story accurately. Does "John went to a park" help us to imagine the park that he went to? No. Let's add details! Write the first paragraph of a story about a character who went to a park. Feel free to choose another setting of your liking, and be sure to mention the characters. Anything could happen, so use your imagination and have fun! Add lots of details!

Describe the setting: fresh scary fun
pink large NOISY

Include sound words: bonk! yikes! meow!
he he!! ouch! zap!

Use small actions: ran quickly spun like a ballerina yelled loudly ate slow as a sloth jumped wildly bonked her head

Add dialogue:
"Look at the beautiful bird," she said. "You're the best," she replied.
"I love football!" he shouted.
Mom called out, "Let's walk towards the slides."
"Look out!" the stranger yelled.
