According to some studies, the most serious health issue facing people in the 21st century is our sedentary <sup>1</sup> _____ (metropolis) lifestyle, which seems to be causing more problems than stress, smoking and poor diet combined. It's not only that most of us spend eight hours a day at work almost literally 'chained' to a desk, but we seem to <sup>2</sup> _____ (obsess) spend most of our free time in front of a screen as well. Most people, even those in large cities, live in <sup>3</sup> _____ (solitary), relying almost exclusively on the internet to connect them with the wider world. The majority of their <sup>4</sup> _____ (interaction) with their family and friends takes place through social media sites. This pressure to stay 'connected' ironically leaves many behaving in a less <sup>5</sup> _____ (society) manner than ever before as they withdraw from real human contact.

Teenagers especially appear to have a high <sup>6</sup> _____ (susceptible) to the charms of modern technology. In extreme cases, they can become very <sup>7</sup> _____ (irritate) if their parents try to take their mobile phones or tablets away. Psychologists maintain that this is a clear sign of <sup>8</sup> _____ (addict) and needs to be handled before it gets out of hand. However, by 'help' they mean seeking professional help to set them on the road to <sup>9</sup> _____ (recover). Although this may be available, it can be quite <sup>10</sup> _____ (price), making it difficult for average wage-earners to afford.
