B9. Rome now asks for tourists to pay a small fee to get close to the Trevi Fountain. From 2 February
B10. 2026, every visitors pay 2 euros to walk down the steps near the water and throw a coin. People can
B11. still to see the fountain for free from the square above, and the view stays clear for everyone. The B12. city wants that visitors to show more respect for the monument. City leaders say the main goal is
B13. crowd control, not profit. The Trevi Fountain often gets too crowded, and problems such like
B14. pickpocketing happen there. The city already tested lots lines and time limits, and officials say this
B15. system worked well. Around ten million people waited in line at last year, with very busy days in B16. the summer. Tickets apply only during so busy daytime hours, while late evening access stays free.
B17. The money will help care them for historic sites and improve visits; however, Rome residents don't B18. pay the fee. City leaders say this plan supports more better tourism and protects the sites for the future.
